NATURAL SCIENCE

REDUCTION

PREMISE

Chemistry can be understood through physics at a fundamental level, but chemists rarely solve chemical problems by calculating every particle in the universe.

QUESTION

If everything is ultimately physics, does that make chemistry, biology and psychology merely convenient descriptions?