NATURAL SCIENCE

ORIGIN

PREMISE

The observable universe is about 13.8 billion years old, while Earth is about 4.5 billion years old. Every human being appeared extraordinarily late in cosmic history.

QUESTION

Does arriving so late in cosmic history make humanity seem insignificant—or strangely remarkable?