SOCIAL SCIENCE

STRANGERS

PREMISE

Most people you encounter every day are strangers, yet cities depend on millions of small acts of trust between people who do not know one another.

QUESTION

Why do we trust strangers at all?